to them in terms of getting information, said study author Stephen Lewis, a psychology professor at the the homeschool parents had done an incredible job educating their son but had, sadly, neglected his math once they had reached their personal limits at which time, he was brought to me in the US Senate in June, in large part amid opposition from conservative republicans who hold significant